

Problem Set 3

I have observed that the average insertion times when using chaining as a solution for collision in hash tables is faster than using probing functions, which on average took more than 80 nanoseconds compared to using chaining.